

GSIT Master's Degree Program
2019 Admissions

Purpose of Establishment

The Graduate School of Interpretation & Translation (GSIT) of Hankuk University of Foreign Studies (HUFS) was established in 1979 to foster outstanding conference international interpreters and translators to meet the demand created by increased global exchange as the Korean economy developed and grew. Offering eight languages (English, French, German, Russian, Spanish, Chinese, Japanese, and Arabic), the GSIT is the leading institution in Korea for educating professional interpreters active in the fields of politics, economy, society, culture, science, and sports, as well as translators contributing to information exchanges with other nations. The school is dedicated to developing the top international communication professionals in Korea and Asia, equipping conference interpreters and professional translators with international acumen and in-depth knowledge in a wide range of specialized fields, building on academic theory in the field of interpretation and translation, creating new educational methodologies, and fostering educators and researchers engaged in the study of literature from around the world.
